

CHALLENGES TO LIVING YOUR BEST PLANT LIFE: MONEY - SPACE - LIGHT

Have you ever researched how to garden on a budget? If so, you've probably found thousands of resources. (When I search online for the phrase "gardening on a budget" I get exactly 275,000 hits). There are also thousands of resources available for low light and small-space gardening. In spite of these resources, if you still feel money, light, and space are constraints, why?

Respond in the box below.

Maybe you've seen the techniques but you haven't tried them and are skeptical?

Do you feel that budget friendly techniques take up more time and time is the true constraint?

Are you overwhelmed with the amount of information available and unsure where to start?

If it's not these then take a moment to really, honestly consider if money, space, and/or light, are true constraints - not only a constraint but one of THE reasons why you don't have the plant life you want.

If you really feel money, space, or light is a constraint - COOL.

Now that you've carefully identified these barriers you can work to eliminate them.
